

73rd International Meeting in Neudietendorf (Germany) 30th July / 2nd – 5th August 2023

Health care challenge – Can we reconcile what patients expect of us with what we are able to deliver?

The physician as a noble and respected helper in times of need has nowadays become a specialist and „service provider“. How do we meet the demands, requirements and needs of our patients? Are we able to refuse certain treatments or, on the contrary, do we feel obliged to offer every treatment because we can?

Can we practice medicine according to our principles and ideals and will our patients allow themselves to be guided along the path we advise them to take? How are we, as those who treat, care for, or accompany our patients, limited in our freedom by external constraints such as lack of time or staff, the price of medications, the limits of technology? What can the sick person demand from us and what can we ask of them?

During the three days of study, we will develop this topic through presentations and group discussions, and we will share our experiences across national and cultural borders. Three days of relaxation and discovery prior to the meeting with excursions in Thuringia will allow us to make new friends or to refresh existing friendships.

A special conference with personal encounters and discussion about topics which tend to be avoided.

Details about how to enrol and the full programme will be available early next year on our website; medecinedelapersonne.org/en

Languages

German, French and English

- Written versions of the lectures will be available in the three languages.
- The discussions will be translated ad hoc so that they can be understood in all three languages.
